Stolen check

CLEAR

Not recorded as stolen

No theft report is recorded against this vehicle. Tasmanian records are not available through this service, and the absence of a report does not by itself prove a vehicle was never stolen.

Written-off history

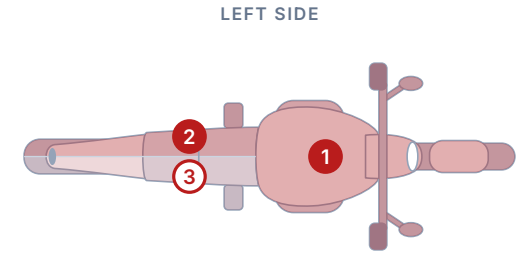

CRITICAL RISK

Statutory write-off: cannot be re-registered

Damage was recorded as collision. The registry records damage in 3 places, each shown with this check. The incident was recorded on 2022-11-02. A statutory write-off is damaged so severely that it can never be registered for road use again in Australia. It can legally be sold only for parts or scrap.

What to do next

Do not buy this vehicle to drive. If the seller is presenting it as roadworthy, treat that as a serious warning about the whole listing.

Money owing

CLEAR

No money owing

No security interest is registered against this vehicle on the Personal Property Securities Register, so no lender has a claim over it.

Registration status

ADVISORY

Registration has expired

This vehicle is not currently registered. Registration expired on 2026-06-30. It cannot legally be driven on public roads until registration is renewed.

What to do next

Factor the renewal cost into your offer, and arrange an unregistered vehicle permit if you need to move it.

Vehicle identity

CLEAR

Identified as a 2019 Testmake Testmodel

The national register identifies this vehicle as a 2019 Testmake Testmodel, black.

What to do next

Check this matches the vehicle in front of you, and that the VIN on the motorcycle matches the VIN in this report.

This report reflects what the official Australian vehicle registries held at the time of the search. Records change, so it is a snapshot rather than a guarantee about the vehicle. Always check that the VIN or chassis number on the motorcycle matches the one in this report. A registration record shows who is responsible for a vehicle on the road, not who legally owns it; whether money is owed on a vehicle is answered by a PPSR search. If an official registry record contains an error, only the state or territory road authority that issued it can amend it.
